OUTLOOK: Another Pacific cold front will move into the Northwest, bringing clouds and showers to Washington and Oregon. High pressure will cover the Rocky Mountains and Great Basin, resulting in a cool, mostly sunny day for this region. The onshore flow will continue for the entire Pacific coast. The Southwest will be warm and dry. High temperatures will range from the 50's to the 70's in the Northern tier of the US. Highs in the 80's to 90's are expected elsewhere, with a few readings near 100 in California and the desert Southwest. Moderate fire activity is expected in the desert Southwest and California. Minimal activity is expected elsewhere.
