OUTLOOK:

*** RED FLAG WARNING IN FLORIDA FOR LOW RELATIVE HUMIDITY BELOW 35 PERCENT. ***

High pressure will keep the temperatures in the South at or above normal. A slight chance of showers is forecasted for central and southern Florida as a weak trough of low pressure moves in from the Bahamas. Daytime high temperatures will range from the low 80's over much of the Gulf Coast to the mid 70's in the Carolinas.

An upper level low pressure system is moving into the Pacific Northwest bringing rain showers and thunderstorms across much of northern California, Oregon and southwest Washington. A cold front dropping down out of Canada will bring rain showers and windy conditions to the Rockies.

The Southwest and southern California will remain under clear skies with high temperatures in the low 80's. Daytime high temperatures for the rest of the region will be in the 40's to 60's.

Rain is expected over the Ohio Valley as a cold front passes through the area. Hail, wind, and isolated tornados are likely to occur. A weak disturbance will also bring showers across Detroit, Cleveland, and Pittsburgh today. High temperatures will range from the 40's and 50's across the northern Plains to the 80's across the central Plains.

A few showers are forecasted across parts of New York state and Pennsylvania as a warm front cross the area. High pressure will keep the rest of the Northeast under partly sunny skies with mild temperatures. High temperatures will range from the 40's and 50's across northern New England to the 60's elsewhere.
