OUTLOOK:

Weather Discussion: Warmer and drier weather will be the rule over the next few days in the West as strong high pressure develops over the region. However, a disturbance off the California coast will bring a threat of mostly dry thunderstorms to the Sierra Friday and Saturday and possibly spreading into portions of northern California and the Pacific Northwest on the weekend. In eastern Oklahoma and north-central Texas, hot and dry weather will continue Friday before a cold front brings slightly cooler temperatures and a chance of thundershowers over the weekend.
