OUTLOOK:

Weather Discussion: Isolated dry thunderstorms are possible over portions of Northern California, Western Great Basin, and the Northwest through Monday. Dry and unstable conditions, particularly along the West Coast states and Great Basin, can be expected through early next week. A weather system is expected to move across the Northwest and Northern Rockies by early to mid week with an increase in wind and a chance of thunderstorms. Elsewhere, thunderstorms are expected to move into southern portions of California and Nevada by early to mid week.

Red Flag Warning: Eastern Oregon for Haines Index of 6 and low relative humidity.
Fire Weather Watches: Monday morning through Monday evening for North and Central Idaho Panhandle for low humidity and unstable conditions. Eastern Washington for Haines Index of 6 and low relative humidity. Southern and central Utah mountains for dry thunderstorms.
