Predictive Services Discussion: A strong upper-level trough will move into the Northwest tomorrow with a weak upper low just off the southern California coast that will move inland tonight. Ridging will strengthen ahead of the trough over the Southwest, with ridging extending north and east through into the Great Lakes and Northeast. A strong Pacific cold front will move into the Northwest. Elevated to critical fire weather conditions are expected across much Intermountain West into the adjacent northern and central Plains. The strongest winds are forecast to occur in portions of the Great Basin, Montana, and Wyoming. Rain, heavy at times, is forecast for western Washington into northwest Oregon during the day. Rain will spread into the Oregon Cascades and eastern Washington overnight. Isolated to scattered thunderstorms are possible over Arizona into southeast California, far southern Nevada, and southwest Utah as moisture gets drawn northward from Mexico. Rain will continue across the Southeast associated with the remnants of Nicholas.

Constructing Line Without A Safe Anchor Point

Operational Engagement Category

When deciding where to build fireline, the following considerations must be weighed:

- Can you hold the line? How do you do so and ensure your safety if there is a danger of the fire hooking under/around you?
- Are there adequate safety zones and escape routes? Review what constitutes an adequate safety zone and escape route. Who has the responsibility to designate them and monitor their continued suitability?
- Can you develop your starting point into an anchor point? List some effective anchor points. Describe how you would develop your starting point into an anchor point.
- Have you posted lookouts? Where should they be posted? Can they see the main fire? Describe the qualities of a skilled lookout?
- Do you have effective communications? Who do you need to be in contact with? If there are problems with communications, what can you do to improve them?
- To reduce risk, evaluate several locations before making a decision. Talk about fires where you have had to relocate the line because your anchor point did not hold the fire.
- How have you mitigated Watch Out Situation #8 in the past?
